Eye Con-Talk

by Cherie Garretson, English Senior

We rub past each other like two bolts of satin.
Innocence is not a horizontally wid-en-ing eye.
I lower mine behind Chinese fans transparent as rice paper.
Yours pierce like slivers of cut and dried bamboo.

We smile
then slowly slide
                away
like skiffs upon the Li.