OS

Brenda Tyrrell

is a senior with an English and classical studies double major and a world films study minor. She has enjoyed her time at Sketch immensely and will miss reading the wide variety of submissions from talented ISU students. After graduation, Brenda anticipates pursuing a master's degree in literature. When she is not doing her homework, she can be found reading H.G. Wells and creating new vegan recipes.

Caroline Lynch

is a senior in English with minors in journalism, technical communication, and sociology. When she is not pouring herself into a new book, she can be found filming and editing short films, a hobby she hopes to maintain on the side of her career as an editor in publishing—her dream job.

Daniel Gill

is an English major. He too has hopes and dreams. His biggest concern is that Jim Henson and his Creature Shop get the credit they deserve.

Kandyce J. McConico

is a senior in English who has a strange love for disturbed characters. In her free time, she enjoys aromatic bubble baths, spicy guacamole, and rereading Wuthering Heights.

Kelsey Cummings

is a senior in English with a minor in technical communication. She believes that no dream worth having comes easily, that one can never own too many pairs of Converse sneakers, and that art is the best medicine for a withered soul.

Monika J. Sharma

is a senior in graphic design with a minor in English. When she's not doing design-related things, she can usually be found dancing wherever there is an open space or loud music. She also loves napping with her dogs, whose cuddles will always be the greatest stress relievers.
