

I Fell in Love with a Poem

Alexandra (Sasha) Goldina

I fell in love with a poem

I fell in love with a poem
So I cut it out and I took it home
my mind filled with doubt.

So I cut it out.
But was I prepared?
My mind filled with doubt
I trembled, so scared.

But was I prepared,
My heart beat in my chest!
I trembled, so scared,
The poem etched in my breast.

My heart beat in my chest,
so I swallowed it whole.
The poem etched in my breast
and burnt into my soul.

So I swallowed it whole.
My vision had blurred;
and burnt into my soul
every last word.

My vision had blurred
Yet my mind was so clear.
Every last word
had erased all my fear.

Yet my mind was so clear
as I walked myself home!
It erased all my fear:
my love for that poem.

Sasha Goldina is a Junior in Advertising. She loves romance, poetry, and beautiful women. Her pantoum is a love story about another poem that brought her out of a dark place in her life.