Christmas Party 1959

The Junior Chapter of the American Veterinary Medical Association at Iowa State University held its annual Christmas party on December 17, 1959, in the Great Hall, Memorial Union. An attendance of approximately 500 was estimated.

Bob Creel acted as Master of Ceremonies for the program. Highlight of the program was a group of Girl Scouts from State Center, Iowa who presented a minstrel show. The group was headed by Mrs. Jean Schoel whose husband is a veterinarian in State Center.

The wives of the junior students presented a skit. Also included were carols led by Gerald Kelso, distribution of gifts from the various pharmaceutical houses and merchants, and the traditional visit of Santa Claus with his sacks of candy.

Juniors Present Winter Smoker

The annual Jr. A.V.M.A. Winter Smoker was held January 13, 1960, at Great Hall in the Memorial Union.

The smoker was highlighted by skits presented by the Junior class depicting the more humorous side of the classroom experiences of the veterinary students. Tom Willroth, '61, chairman of the smoker, announced an attendance of nearly 300 persons, including most of the staff members.

The election of previously nominated Jr. A.V.M.A. officers was also conducted during the smoker. The results were as follows: President-Elect, Charles Haight, '61; Secretary, Al Hassan; Vice-President, Ken Hook, '60; Critic, Richard Dillman, '61.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the smoker.

NEWCASTLE DISEASE IN HUMANS
Newcastle disease is a minor occupational disease limited chiefly to persons working with chickens and eggs and to those concerned with control of the disease. Bird to man transmission occurs but man to man transmission has not been reported. Acute conjunctivitis is the usual manifestation, although systemic disease has been reported.
