Spock's brain is missing.
We must find Spock's brain,
says Captain Kirk.
That girl who was here took it.
She's somewhere in this galaxy.
We must find her
and get back Spock's brain.

I've seen this two or three times before.
I turn the channel,
seeking out new civilizations,
boldly going where no man has gone before.
An entire revolution around my universe,
finding nothing
in this search of familiar worlds,
and I am back with the Enterprise.
Kirk and Bones are beaming down,
with Spock's body, on a hunch,
to an apparently primitive planet.
I feel OK knowing
they'll find the missing brain.
