

Narcissus

She grows in our hearts and homes during frosted February strains
to hear be mine.

Like the little girl
with scabby knees
who is forced up
from the mud
to wear the white of first communion,

We pull her from the tired soil of
chipped clay pots
flaking from forcings
of women who mothered our fathers.