1987 Norden Distinguished Teacher

Each year, Norden Laboratories presents an award to a faculty member for outstanding teaching in veterinary medicine. The recipient is chosen by students and fellow faculty members in recognition of his or her abilities. The 1987 Norden Distinguished Teacher Award was presented to Dr. George W. Beran at the annual Awards Ceremony in April. Dr. Beran receives this award for the second time; he first received the award in 1980.

Dr. Beran received his DVM at Iowa State College in 1954, and earned his Ph.D. in Medical Microbiology at the University of Kansas School of Medicine in 1959. Silliman University awarded Dr. Beran an Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters in 1973. He is board certified in epidemiology by the American College of Veterinary Preventive Medicine and by the American College of Epidemiology.

Dr. Beran joined the faculty at Iowa State University in 1973. He is currently a professor of Veterinary Microbiology and Preventive Medicine and a full member of the Graduate College Faculty. He teaches courses in public health, epidemiology, history of veterinary medicine and world food issues. His lectures are punctuated with personal accounts and individual thinking. Student contributions to class are strongly encouraged.

Dr. Beran's specializations are protection of human health from animal-associated diseases and eradication of animal diseases. He is extensively involved in eradication programs for two diseases: rabies in developing countries of South America, Africa and Asia; and pseudorabies in the United States. The latter project is just getting underway, and Iowa will be a key state in its success.

Dr. Beran's classroom is the world. He has lectured or presented scientific papers in 27 countries on all continents. His work takes him throughout the United States and the world. It is his ability to share these experiences that has earned him the respect and admiration of his students.
