Fall Banquet

Good food, fine entertainment and a brilliant speech were the highlights of the Tenth Annual Fall Banquet attended by Junior A.V.M.A. members and faculty of the Division of Veterinary Medicine. Russel Schelkopf was general chairman and master of ceremonies of the banquet held in Great Hall, Memorial Union, Iowa State College, on Oct. 1, 1957.

Dr. Thomas Bell, faculty advisor, welcomed the members and guests with an entertaining narration of past banquets, which ended with a welcome to the freshman class into a "fine professional brotherhood."

Following the introduction of the class representatives and Warren Bohnhoff, president of the Iowa State College Student Chapter of the American Veterinary Medical Association, Dean I. A. Merchant introduced the Veterinary Medical Staff and other departmental staff members in the division. Two new departmental heads were noted during the faculty introduction — Dr. F. K. Ramsey of veterinary pathology and in veterinary physiology, Dr. M. J. Swenson.

The speaker of the evening was Dr. W. W. Armistad, dean of the College of Veterinary Medicine at Michigan State University and president of the American Veterinary Medical Association. The speech, brilliant in context and delivery, dealt with the profession of veterinary medicine — the respect of professional ethics, its many facets and versatility, the A.V.M.A. and why interest is and is not manifested in it. Dr. Armistad explained the many minor yet important changes in personal conduct that aid in "professionalization" of the veterinarian.

The newly appointed publicity chairman is Fred Peacock. Roger Schladetsky is the Student Religious Council delegate. Representatives to Cardinal Guild are Hank Philmon and Charles Blank; representative to Union Board is Don Shannon, and Robert Klindt is the representative to the Bomb Publications Board. Les Classick heads the educational committee, and Robert Billiar is student chairman of the library committee. Members of the program committee are John Tobola, Francis Copeland and Ron Beckman. Beckman, Ed Lindquist and Ed Mathers guide the Pre-Vet Club. Curt Sander was chosen to represent the chapter at the AVMA Convention last summer.

Dr. George Christenson of the Department of Veterinary Anatomy spoke to the chapter at their October meeting. His topic was, "The History of Veterinary Education". He emphasized Iowa State and showed slides of the early buildings, laboratories, classrooms and instructors.

The chapter members approved the annual budget which called for dues of $4.50. This was in compliance with last year's change in the constitution which called for dues to be based on the budget, but not to exceed $7.00; this is a change from the previous "set-dues" of $4.00.

What Is Your Opinion?

Craig Larson, '58

INTERVIEW QUESTION

What do you think could be done to improve relationships among veterinarians in the field?

ANSWERS

Hillman Nelson, '58: I think our method of improving relationships between veterinarians in the field is to stress more strongly the state and regional veterinary associations. Many veterinarians do not have time for so-called "social calls" to their colleagues in the area. The association meetings will give the veterinarians a chance to get to know each other better and also to exchange information and ideas.

Nelson

Winstrom

James R. Wistrom, '59: I don't believe that devising methods to improve better relationships among veterinarians in the field is the answer to the problem that we have. I believe the only effective way we can have good relationships among veterinarians is by creating a better character and by establishing better ethics in the veterinary students. If students are well-grounded in ethics and have obtained a high character while preparing for the veterinary profession they will have eliminated many of the problems which develop among the veterinarians in the field.

Edward Mather, '60: It appears that this situation begins in our educational institutions. How can 6 or more years of keen competition and rivalry come to a screeching halt at graduation time? Therefore, cooperation rather than competition seems to be a job for our educators and the local veterinary medical association through promotion of stronger ethics and moral attitudes.

Mather

Burton Wolf, '61: In order for practitioners to help each other they first must become acquainted. I feel that by actively participating in their local (county or regional) associations they can meet their fellows on a social as well as on a professional level. With a mutual feeling of "esprit" developed by the local association an important milestone will be reached.

Freshmen—From Four Countries, Ten States

The freshman class has 72 students, 52 of the students come from Iowa, 20 from other states and countries.

Fourty-four of the men have spent 2 years in pre-veterinary study; 17 have spent 3 years; five have spent 4 years, and six have degrees. There are 30 veterans in the class; 29 of the men are married and they have a total of 32 children. The average age of the class is 23, with the youngest being 19 and the oldest 32.

AUXILIARY ACTIVITIES

The auxiliary to the A.V.M.A. student chapter opened their series of meetings on October 3 with 48 new members. Dr. and Mrs. Kingrey shared their scenic trip to Europe with them.

This year marks the tenth anniversary for the Iowa State College Student Chapter Auxiliary. The members are working on several money-making projects to support a page in the Bomb of '58 to mark this anniversary and recognize the auxiliary for its 10 years of service. In the past some of their projects were bake sales and fashion shows. This year, however, they are making and selling personal name plaques; these may be used for the home or office and make excellent gifts. If anyone desires information on these plaques contact Mrs. Russ L. Schelkopf, President, 937 Pammel Court.

LIBRARY GROWS—NEEDS SUPPORT

Last year the library moved to its new location, a spacious, well-lighted room at the east end of the ground floor of the new Veterinary Medical Laboratory building. Its central location within the division is one of its advantages over the all-college library. Another advantage is that its contents pertain to the veterinary field, so one does not have to sort it from other literature.

Some new furniture has been purchased; future plans call for all new furniture and equipment. New books purchased and journals subscribed to and bound last year were paid for by contributions from the ISC Veterinary Medical Alumni Association and from the student chapter.

The operation of the library is the function of the Veterinary Medical Library Committee, a joint faculty-student committee. The faculty members are: Dr. Robert Hadek, Dr. Carlos Contag, Dr. Frank Mitchell. The students are: Robert Biliar, Carl Graham, Don Casey, John Jensen, Jack Riddell, Jack Stocker. Mr. Graham, the librarian, is on duty four evenings a week. This year the library committee hopes to catalogue the books, purchase books and journals, bind journals, get more students and faculty to use the library, obtain more equipment, and obtain funds to accomplish this.

It is gratifying to know that many alumni realize the value of the library, knowing that their gifts benefit all of the students—present and future. In the past the library has been gifted with the private libraries of veterinarians. These served as a good foundation and are well-appreciated, but as more old books come in, duplication is occurring. Even though these books are still welcomed, the most useful contribution is financial aid. For with cash on hand, the library committee can purchase needed books and subscribe to the many important periodicals. Organizations, as well as individuals, are invited to send their contributions in; get your name on our honor roll of supporters. The
